Search comes to an end after local man swept away in flash flood is recovered

When it comes to living in a small community, most everybody knows everybody else, or at the least a family member or their friend. So when disasters like fire and floods strike, most think nothing about joining in the efforts to help a neighbor out. This was shown on a large scale last week when a devastating flash flooding of Bracken Creek took the home of Delmar Nickoson on Augusta-Minerva Road and left him nowhere to be found. Searchers gathered Sunday and Monday mornings with the hopes of finding him injured and alive in a debris field and going home at dark both nights knowing that on Tuesday, the search would become a recovery, not a rescue. Volunteers continued to gather through Saturday, when the largest number of volunteers gathered at the Needmore Storage Units to help bring closure to the family. Finally at around 2:15 p.m. Saturday, July 29th, a pleasure boater contacted Bracken County Dispatch to say they may have located Mr. Nickoson in the Ohio River just a couple of miles east of the Meldahl Dam. Bracken County Coroner John Parker was able to make a positive identification of Mr. Nickoson after removing him from the river at a nearby boat dock owned by Anthony Habermehl. After his location in the river, ground searchers were dismissed and the news was given to his family. The search was over and he could be laid to rest. Bracken County Emergency Management Coordinator Neider Reynolds was very appreciative of all the volunteers and those individuals, churches, organizations, and businesses who provided food, water, and other donations and for the cooperation of the local land owners who granted access to their properties and allowed a command center to be established there to aid in the search for Mr. Nickoson. Clean up of the debris in Bracken Creek will be based on the guidelines from the Natural Resource Conservation Service (NRCS) and is not known at present when that may occur.

Thoughts and Meditations from the Scriptures

SINS THAT CRY OUT TO HEAVEN

There are sins that cry out to heaven for justice. The slaughter of Abel by his brother Cain is the primordial example. A premeditated murder of one's brother certainly cries out for justice. The oppression of the Israelites in Egypt is another sin that cried to heaven, and throughout the Bible we see the oppression of the poor, of orphans and widows, and of refugees as sins that God is particularly inclined to avenge. The Book of Exodus makes this principle explicit: "Do not mistreat or oppress a foreigner, for you were foreigners in Egypt. Do not take advantage of the widow or the fatherless. If you do and they cry out to me, I will certainly hear their cry. My anger will be aroused, and I will kill you with the sword; your wives will become widows and your children fatherless." (Exodus 22:21-24 NIV) This is a moral exhortation that is all too relevant today, when millions of refugees have no place to call home and widows and orphans are all around us. Ask yourself who in your community fits the bill of the widow, the orphan or the foreigner. We might call them by different names, i.e., single mothers, or undocumented immigrants, or the homeless and working poor, but these people are God's children, and they have a special place in His heart. — Christopher Simon

"Do not exploit the poor because they are poor and do not crush the needy in court, for the Lord will take up their case and will exact life for life." — Proverbs 22:22-23 NIV

Senator Thayer: Parents And Teachers Should Push For Longer Summers For Students

As we turn the page on July 2017, I find myself asking the same question once again, "Is summer over already?" To the disappointment of most Kentucky students, and many parents, the answer is an overwhelming "yes." In Senate District 17, Scott County students will report back for classes on Thursday, August 10. For Grant County students, the first day back is either Monday, August 14, or Tuesday, August 15, depending on your grade. In Kenton County, students are due back a bit later: Wednesday, August 23.

Because of a new law passed in 2017 (which I sponsored), districts will have a new incentive to begin classes even later than August 23 beginning in the 2018-19 school year. This new law, Senate Bill 50, states that a district that starts school no earlier than the Monday closest to August 26 will not be required to have the minimum 170 instructional days but still have 1,062 minimum hours.

Some districts have suggested that under this new law, they might have full days of classes Monday through Thursday with a half-day on Friday, which will be completely acceptable should a district opt to start at the later date provided. One of the benefits of this law is that it will preserve summer for students and parents and allow families to spend more time together enjoying the summer weather. This law also preserves total local control of school calendars.

Starting the school year in early August negatively affects Kentucky's tourism industry. In 2016 the Kentucky Travel Industry Association conducted a study that illustrates the detrimental impact of early school start dates on our state's economy. The study found:

The August school days cost the Kentucky economy over $432 MILLION in economic revenue and activity.

The August school days cost Kentucky close to 6,000 jobs, and the reduction in workforce in August results in $97 MILLION in lost wages.

The August school days cost Kentucky over $45 MILLION in state and local tax revenue.

Early school start dates also limit the attendance of children at the Kentucky State Fair held in Louisville every year in late August. This year's fair dates are August 17-27. There are so many fun activities to plan, contests to enter, exhibits to see, and shows to enjoy at the Kentucky State Fair. Why not give kids and their families the opportunity to attend at any and all times throughout the 10-day event?

Additionally, prolonging the start of classes will improve energy efficiency at schools and improve the safety and quality of life for our students. Utility costs, currently driven by the over-taxing of equipment that cool the large facilities in summer, would decrease. School bus rides on hot August days are likely to be less comfortable for students, as well.

Under this law, the local board of education will every year appoint a school district calendar committee that includes teachers, a principal, district staff, parents, and members of the business community. The committee will make school calendar recommendations to the superintendent and the school board that take into consideration the economic impact of the school calendar on the community and on Kentucky.

I urge all parents, teachers, and school board members to keep this new law in mind in early August. Longer summers will benefit everyone. Make this new option of extending our summers a priority in 2018. If you feel strongly about this issue, I encourage you to contact your local school board members and superintendents.

If you have any questions or comments about these issues or any other public policy issue, please call me toll-free at 1-800-372-7181 or email me at Damon.Thayer@LRC.ky.gov. You can also review the Legislature's work online at www.lrc.ky.gov.

This Sunday we were still in Romans 12-14 on "How To Love Someone You Can't Stand". Shower people with love and respect. Love heals all. Pray every day.

Jerry Zeigler had the opening prayer. Jerry sang "He Raised Me Up". When Jerry sings the angels in Heaven stop and listen! He is so good!

Our church message was by Bro. Jacob Smith. He will be going back to college in August. Let's support him and his mission. He preached on "Turn Your Life To Christ". Let others see your light. Let your little light shine. Invite others to church!

Closing prayer was by Greg Perkins.

On the prayer list is the family of Delmar Nickoson, Sheila Landreth, and Marty Polley. Pray for the sick & hurting, the men & women in the service. Pray for the safe return of Danielle Shackelford who has been on missionary work overseas. Donna Osborne's brother came through his surgery okay. He had several brain tumors. Pray for Liz White (throat cancer).

We honored Kathy Fryman today. Her family came with her to church.

Invite others to church to come worship our Lord!

FIRST BAPTIST CHURCH OF AUGUSTA

by Roberta Wood

In John 18:20-21 Jesus answered the high priest with this, "I spake openly to the world; I ever taught in the synagogue, and in the temple, whither the Jews always resort; and in secret have I said nothing. Why askest thou me? Ask them which heard me, what I have said unto them: behold, they know what I said." After Jesus said this there was one officer that struck Jesus and said, "Answerest thou the high priest so? Do you know what Jesus' answer was to this? Read John 18:23 to find the answer.

After all the bad weather we have had, Sunday was so beautiful. Thank you God!

There are so many that were on our prayer list Sunday and I'd say they were on yours also. Dustin McCane family (lost everything in the flood), Tim Wheeler family (lost everything in the flood), Delmar Nickoson family (with the loss of his life), and don't forget Betty McClanahan (in Hospice Care).

Sunday School is at 9:30 a.m. every Sunday as is Morning Worship at 10:30 a.m. Sunday night is Bible Study at 6 p.m. Come join us in one or all. God Bless!

GREETINGS FROM ST. JAMES

by Caroline Jefferson

Our sincerest sympathy is extended to the family and friends of Mr. Delmar Nickoson whose body was discovered this past weekend in the Ohio River approximately 2 miles from the Meldahl Dam. May God bless them with peace and comfort as they mourn the loss of their loved one! May those who worked tirelessly in the search and rescue and then in the recovery efforts be blessed for the love and concern they extended to their fellow human. Bracken County is truly an exceptional place to call home as demonstrated by the number of volunteers who came to offer assistance in a most critical time of need. The death of Mr. Nickoson was the ultimate tragedy in last weekend's flooding and we pray that the family will heal as will the community! Although the events did not occur as we had all hoped and prayed, we can take comfort in knowing that God's will was done and we accept His plans for each of us!

St. Augustine community invites everyone to their Summer Festival August 11 through August 13! This is the major fundraiser for school and church and a fun weekend will be had by all!

Bracken County Expresses Gratitude

For last week's Missing Person Event

Judge Executive Earl Bush, EMA Director Neider Reynolds, and Buffalo Trace Search and Rescue Coordinator, Alex Hycza, wish to thank everyone for their support and efforts during the week-long search for Mr. Nickoson. The search could not have even been attempted without state and local agencies, friends, family, and other counties support with much needed help during the devastation of this magnitude. The county is blessed to have citizens, organizations, churches, and businesses who offered support and help with the needs required in times like these. The local landowners were very supportive by granting access to the search area and allowing staging area locations to be set up on their land.

There is also a long list of volunteers who helped in everyway possible during long search days, with food, drinks, donations, and working other individual assignments. It would be impossible to mention everyone without leaving someone out. So it is with a high expression of gratitude we thank everyone who supported the efforts of this search and rescue and recovery.

Bracken County is very proud of its citizens who will come together in a time of need to take care of our people. Thanks to everyone for your help in any and all ways. God Bless and God Bless the family of one of our own.

“Saved By The Scan” launched by American Lung Association

Lung cancer is the leading cancer killer of both women and men, and according to the American Lung Association, the new availability of lung cancer screening for those considered at high risk can save thousands of lives. To educate the public about this breakthrough, the American Lung Association and the Ad Council launched the first-of-its-kind public service announcement campaign, “Saved By The Scan,” on August 1, World Lung Cancer Day.

“Lung cancer is the nation’s leading cause of cancer deaths, and here in Kentucky, an estimated 4,830 persons will be diagnosed with lung cancer in 2017 alone,” said Patricia Volz, vice president of communication for the American Lung Association locally. “To save lives, lung cancer screening for individuals at high risk is truly the breakthrough we need in Kentucky and across the nation. Lung cancer screening is so promising because it allows us to diagnose the disease in the early stages when it is more curable.”

The American Lung Association encourages the estimated 9 million people in the U.S. who are at high risk for lung cancer to consult with their doctor about getting screened. Individuals at high risk are: anyone aged 55-80 who has a smoking history of 30 “pack years” (1 pack a day for 30 years, 2 packs for 15 years, or any combination of years and packs that equals 30) and is either still a smoker or has quit in the last 15 years.

Individuals who may be at high risk are encouraged to visit SavedByTheScan.org, to take the lung cancer screening eligibility quiz and find additional information about how to speak to their doctor about their risk and screening.

“Smoking is a serious addiction, and 51.1% percent of the population in Kentucky are current or former smokers,” Volz said. “We encourage everyone to take steps to improve their health, which means not only quitting smoking but to also learn more about your risk and speak to your doctor about screening, whether you’re a current or former smoker.”

The “Saved By The Scan” campaign focuses on former smokers who often do not receive counseling on lung cancer screening from their doctors, even though they may be eligible for this lifesaving screening. The television spot features a former smoker climbing to the top of a vast mountain of cigarettes and ash, which is symbolic of the effort it took to quit smoking. After conquering the addiction, the former smoker is encouraged to take the extra step to get screened for lung cancer with the tagline, “You stopped smoking. Now start screening.” Academy-Award nominee Rodrigo Prieto, the cinematographer behind “Silence,” “Babel,” “Argo” and “Brokeback Mountain,” shot the creative.

The American Lung Association launched this new campaign through its LUNG FORCE initiative, a national movement to defeat lung cancer, the leading cancer killer of women and men. LUNG FORCE has three priorities: make lung cancer a cause that people care about and act on, educate and empower patients and healthcare providers, and raise critical funds for lung cancer research.

“Through this campaign, we hope to empower and motivate former and current smokers to advocate for themselves and learn more about whether lung cancer screening is right for them,” Volz said. “We have a powerful opportunity to save lives with the new availability of screening for those at high risk, and I hope that this campaign will build conversations in communities throughout Kentucky about screening and encourage action.”

Learn more about the campaign at SavedByTheScan.org, including the option to take a lung cancer screening eligibility quiz.

TRASH TALK

Howdy Folks! Have you ever stopped on a TV channel and suddenly become interested in a topic that you have never thought about? That happened to us as we viewed the Science Channel yesterday and their presentation on rain forests of the world. Unfortunately, these precious parcels of land are being eradicated at an alarming rate of at least 8 million hectares, or 31,000 square miles per year! Researchers “guesstimate” that to be roughly 5 billion trees cut down across the tropics annually! Losing these trees and vegetation means that the medical field is losing life-saving plants because to date, many prescription drugs used in the western world have been derived from plants! 70% of the plants identified by the U.S. National Cancer Institute as having anti-cancer characteristics are found only in forests! Much of today’s understanding of these plants has been gathered from the knowledge of the shaman, or medicine man, of any village. Unfortunately for us again is the fact that the knowledge of these shamans is rapidly disappearing because as rainforests are cut down tribes are abandoning their traditions. Shamans are going extinct as fast, or faster, than the rare endangered plant species!

It has never occurred to us that something as far away as a rainforest could impact our daily lives but according to information from our research, we need to start thinking about the world beyond the confines of Bracken County! Rainforests are often called the lungs of the planet for their role in absorbing carbon dioxide which we all pretty much know is a greenhouse gas; just as importantly, rainforests produce the life giving oxygen upon which all humans and animals depend for survival! Rainforests also stabilize climate, house incredible amounts of plants and wildlife and produce nourishing rainfall all around the globe, thus maintaining the water cycle! Even though rainforests cover less than 3% of the planet, their importance is beyond measure! A tropical rainforest may be home to 480 tree species in a single hectare (2.5 acres) while a temperate forest contains only 6 or 7 tree species in the same acreage. Another example of the enormity of rainforest wildlife is that 1,300 species of butterfly have been documented in a single park in Peru, while the entire European continent is home to less than 400 butterfly species!

Even many of the foods we eat on a daily basis originated in tropical forests including bananas, avocados, mangos, cacao, coffee and papaya among other things. Ingredients for the manufacture of beauty products, shampoos, paint, and a multitude of everyday household items come from these disappearing rainforests and it is time we stop and consider their importance! One could argue that because these rainforests cover only 3% of the earth’s surface, their value would be insignificant as well, but that assumption is far from correct! Scientists are continually discovering new plant and animal species and they are going to the forest’s canopy to research the eco-systems high in the sky! Some areas of the forests are so dense that it can take as long as ten minutes for rain to reach the forest floor!

So now we know a little more about these far off places, and it is up to us to ensure that these areas of the earth are protected and allowed to grow and flourish, and not be bulldozed down to satisfy our every whim! Read more on this topic and realize the importance of your contribution to sustaining the rainforests for generations to come by RECYCLING, REUSING and REDUCING to keep God’s earth clean, green and beautiful! Be seen? you – Bin & Bug.

Keeping Kentucky’s Economy Strong, the Farm Bill Affects us All

By: Mark Haney, Pres.
Kentucky Farm Bureau

The first permanent farm bill was passed in 1938 when farming was much different than it is today. But the purpose of the bill still basically remains the same; to establish and oversee programs that maintain an abundant food supply and help farm families be successful.

I know without a doubt, it is the most important piece of legislation connected to our farmers, ranchers and rural America. But this bill doesn’t just affect farmers; it impacts all of us from a food, fiber and fuel perspective. We at KFB as well as our American Farm Bureau partners are initiating farm bill discussions across the state and throughout the country to bring a unified message to state and national lawmakers of what is needed in this next version of the farm bill.

There are also many other ag-related groups which are directly affected by this all-important legislation, all of which have specific needs and ideas about what should be included.

I have been fortunate enough over the years to have served Farm Bureau at all levels including as a current member of American Farm Bureau Federation’s executive committee. I’ve seen the successes of small farm family operations, the importance of larger farms and ag-related businesses along with the hardships and concerns all of the agriculture industry faces.

As a farmer myself, I deal with these challenges every day but I also celebrate in the rewards of knowing we are doing our part to help feed the world. That is no small task and the farm bill is somewhat of a handbook when it comes to the programs that guide our industry through each five-year period the bills cover.

I am honored for the opportunity along with several other agriculture leaders from across the country to be testifying in front of the Senate Agriculture Committee representing the American Farm Bureau to discuss farm-related issues and to answer any questions the group may have as they prepare for their discussions of the farm bill.

It is critical to keep our lawmakers informed about issues on the farm because what we do affects every citizen in this country and our neighbors from around the world. In order for us to feed the world, we have to have the programs in place that will allow us to stay on the farm and in business. I can’t overstate the importance of this bill, the provisions contained within and the need to help our lawmakers and citizens understand its importance.

The funding for several of the programs contained in this legislation has a target on it in a budgetary time when so many programs are facing financial cuts. When compared to the total federal budget, the farm bill is a very small portion of the overall expenditures. But the impact the ag industry has economically cannot be overstated. The funding that goes into the farm bill is truly an investment made in maintaining the most plentiful and cost efficient food supply in the world.

Additionally, the agriculture industry and rural communities are the backbone of the American economy and certainly Kentucky’s economic development endeavors.

According to the last ag-related economic importance report issued by the University of Kentucky, the total agricultural economic impact was greater than $45 billion employing more than a quarter of a million people.

These numbers are significant when discussing the economic well-being of the state. Agriculture issues are not just something for farm families to be concerned with; every citizen should take an interest in their local farms and this all important farm bill reauthorization.

Our advocacy efforts are more critical now than ever. While times have certainly changed since 1938, the importance of farming has not. In fact, today there are fewer producers than at any other time in history who are being asked to feed more people than ever before. The farm bill will help us do that.

We can all be advocates and I encourage everyone to contact their ag leaders, their local officials and their state and Congressional leaders to let them know agriculture is something you care about.

Fungal Disease Following the Rains

By David Appelman, CEA
Ag and Natural Resources

After the devastating storms 10 days ago and the most recent additional rain, fungal diseases are going to be spreading throughout our crops and gardens. Remember, the best course of action is to have a fungicide applied before the plant gets the disease as a preventative. Once plants are infected, fungicides provide very little curative effect against active infections.

For our gardens, one of the first things you will see is the effects of early blight on Tomatoes. This is caused by rain splashed soil up on the lower parts of the plant. This disease will continue to work its way up the plant, defoliating it and reducing its yield potential.

We also heard last week that powdery mildew was located in the state on vine crops. Again, a preventative fungicide now can keep these crops healthy until the end of the season. Even though it only affects the leaves and not the fruit, a crop like pumpkins will have weak handles which lowers their value and appearance for the fall decoration market.

We also learned that Southern Rust has been confirmed in Western KY 2 weeks ago. Southern Rust has infected corn crops the last 2 years. This disease will not overwinter here and must migrate from the deep south. Now with the moisture and humidity, it may get here even quicker. Corn that has reached the dough stage of development is safe regarding yield lost. Corn that has not reached dough stage is still at risk for yield loss. Another concern is the rapid drying of the corn plant that will be used for silage. Silage crops need to be harvested as soon as possible so optimum moisture is still available for a good fermentation. Rust also affects stalk strength so even though you are not worried about a yield loss, lodging of the crop could be a problem. Fungicide applications on corn are difficult due to the height of the crop, but late crops may benefit from a preventative fungicide application. There is another type of rust on corn called Common Rust and it is not as devastating as Southern Rust. If you think you have Southern Rust, please let us know so we can confirm the disease and document its movement. We need to learn more about this disease as this may be our 3rd year in a row to be affected by it.

Finally, when we think of diseases and fungus, we think of Blue Mold with our tobacco crop. At this time, there are no reports of Blue Mold in KY. Still, conditions are prime for the disease to set in. More importantly, we do have very devastating disease in both Target Spot and Frog Eye that can drastically reduce yields of the lower leaves and greatly affect the quality of the leaves. It is highly recommended to get a protective fungicide on the crop prior to the canopy closure of the leaves. Once sunlight and airflow are reduced to the low portion of the stalk, then diseases can take over.

For more information on fungal disease control, and the products to use for prevention, be sure and contact the Bracken County Extension Office at 606-735-2141.

College students should take advantage of their meal plan

Many colleges require students to have a meal plan, especially if they live on campus. Meal plans vary among colleges, but most will give students a certain number of dining hall meals per week. Students may also be able to add flex dollars to use at the campus food court or other locations. The larger the school is, the greater flexibility students may have.

Students who choose their meal plan carefully may be able to cut college costs by selecting the plan that is best for them, according to the Kentucky Higher Education Assistance Authority (KHEAA).

Most often, the meal plan will come out of students' financial aid or their parents' money if they're footing the bill. Funds will be loaded on a card students swipe at on-campus cafeterias and restaurants.

Students can waste a lot of money eating off-campus and even rack up credit card debt by charging food. Most meals on campus are already paid for through the meal plan, so students should eat on campus as much as possible.

KHEAA is the state agency that administers Kentucky's grant and scholarship programs, including the Kentucky Educational Excellence Scholarship (KEES). KHEAA provides financial literacy videos at <http://its-money.kheaa.com>. KHEAA also provides free copies of "It's Money, Baby," a guide to financial literacy, to Kentucky schools and residents upon request at publications@kheaa.com.

Check those vaccine records

Getting vaccinated according to the recommended immunization schedule is one of the most important things a parent can do to protect their child's health. Diseases can quickly spread among groups of children who aren't vaccinated. Whether it's a baby starting at a new child care facility, a toddler heading to preschool, a student going back to elementary, middle or high school – or even a college freshman – parents should check their child's vaccination records.

Child care facilities, preschool programs, schools and colleges are prone to outbreaks of infectious diseases. Children in these settings can easily spread illnesses to one another due to poor hand washing, not covering their coughs, and other factors such as interacting in crowded environments.

When children are not vaccinated, they are at increased risk for disease and can spread disease to others in their play groups, child care centers, classrooms and communities – including babies who are too young to be fully vaccinated and people with weakened immune systems due to cancer and other health conditions.

Additionally, states may require children who are entering child care or school to be vaccinated against certain diseases. Colleges and universities may have their own requirements, especially for students living in residence halls. Parents should check with their child's doctor, school or the local health department to learn about the requirements in their state or county.

Pay attention to deadlines for financial aid

High school seniors should keep track of deadlines for applying for college financial aid. Here are some tips from the Kentucky Higher Education Assistance Authority (KHEAA):

- File the Free Application for Federal Student Aid (FAFSA) as soon as possible after October 1.
- Check with the financial aid offices of the schools to which you've applied to determine if they require any forms other than the FAFSA.
- Look for scholarships using KHEAA's "Affording Higher Education" and a free online scholarship search. You can find a link to a free search site under the "Paying for College" tab on www.kheaa.com.

• Attend any college fairs and financial aid seminars offered at your high school or in your area. If a company charges a fee for helping with applications, remember that you can do that yourself for free. If you decide to pay for help, make sure the company is reputable by checking with the state Attorney General's office or the Better Business Bureau in your area, as well as the area where the firm is located.

KHEAA is the state agency that administers Kentucky's student financial aid programs, including the Kentucky Educational Excellence Scholarship (KEES). Its sister agency, the Kentucky Higher Education Student Loan Corporation (KHESLC), offers Advantage Loans to help students and parents pay for college or to refinance student loans. Beware of Tobacco Settlement Scam

Online ads, emails claim Kentuckians can receive thousands in monthly income

Attorney General Andy Beshear is warning about a scam that claims Kentuckians can receive tax-free, monthly payments from the Tobacco Master Settlement Agreement (MSA).

Beshear said his office has identified misleading online ads and received reports of scam emails claiming Kentuckians can receive monthly payments directly from the multibillion-dollar MSA. The solicitations proclaim Kentuckians, even if they "never used tobacco," can receive thousands of dollars each month if they pay $5 a month or up to $100 a year to learn how.

Beshear said he does not want Kentuckians to be duped by ads that prey upon the nearly 20 years of positive impact the settlement funds have had in the Commonwealth.

"The ads and emails try to trick Kentuckians into believing something that is simply not true," Beshear said. "MSA payments are made directly to states and territories, and in Kentucky they are used to boost investments in agriculture and help improve health outcomes."

Individuals can potentially receive MSA funds through state programs or private lawsuits. Nevertheless, those who respond to the ads ultimately pay for information to learn how to purchase out-of-state bonds.

Beshear said the purchase of a bond is an investment, and Kentuckians should carefully investigate risks and benefits associated with any investment.

The MSA, reached between the four largest tobacco companies in the U.S. and attorneys general from 46 states, provides annual payments to the states ultimately worth more than $208 billion.

The funds help to compensate states for some of the medical costs associated with tobacco-related illnesses.

Since the first payment in 1999, Kentucky has collected over $2 billion, and is on pace to collect nearly $3 billion over the first 25 years of the agreement.

Kentucky's Tobacco Settlement Agreement Fund Oversight Committee administers the determinations on grant applications from the agricultural fund, which aids farmers and creates sustainable farm-based businesses. Additional MSA revenues support early childhood education, health programs and cancer research.

Better protecting Kentucky families, especially seniors, from fraud is one of the core missions of Beshear's office.

Kentuckians interested in staying ahead of scammers can sign up to receive Scam Alerts from Beshear's office by texting the words KYOAG Scam to GOV311 (468311), or visit ag.ky.gov/scams to sign up with your mobile phone number or email address.

To report scams to the Office of the Attorney General call 888-432-9257 or file a consumer complaint online.

Use the Kentucky Fish and Wildlife Website to Find a Place to Fish

Two employees of the Kentucky Department of Fish and Wildlife Resources recently used the department's website at www.fw.ky.gov to glean information on catching saugeye.

They used the 5-foot contour maps on the "Find a Place to Fish" to study the bottom of Guist Creek Lake in Shelby County and determine a place to fish. They later fished those areas and caught their first saugeye.

"We are trying to provide information on our website to make it easier for anglers to find places to fish and be successful," said Mike Hardin, assistant director of fisheries for Kentucky Fish and Wildlife. "The 'Find a Place to Fish' page allows anglers to sort by county, city, waterbody, access type or even species of fish."

Many of the waterbodies detailed in the "Find a Place to Fish" page contain important fishing information, such as the 5-foot contour maps. "When you pull these waterbodies up, many of them have the location of fish attractors, species assessments as well as the contour maps. We have the contour maps for most of our smaller state-owned lakes as well as the Fishing in Neighborhoods (FINs)

Division of Water Awarded Dam Safety Homeland Security Grant

A $200,000 grant has been awarded to the Kentucky Division of Water by the U.S. Department for Homeland Security Science & Technology Directorate for a pilot project to develop instrumentation monitoring and flood warning systems for dams.

The initial project focus is to research flood warning and instrumentation monitoring activities that are being conducted at dam locations throughout the country, determine the systems that are most applicable to Kentucky dams and develop a Kentucky-specific implementation plan for deployment.

A second round of funding is anticipated in 2018 to execute the implementation plan on a state-owned dam. Future funding opportunities will be determined by the outcomes of the first two years of research and implementation.

"We are enthusiastic to form a partnership with DHS to promote flood warning and technological advances that will eventually make all of Kentucky's dams safer," said Peter Goodman, Director, Kentucky Division of Water.

Final details of the grant award, implementation, and time frame will be determined with Homeland Security over the next 30 days.

Additional information is available at <http://eec.kentucky.gov>.

Hardin said the large reservoirs operated by the U.S. Army Corps of Engineers have commercially available maps at tackle shops near the lakes or for sale online. Many of the large outfitters also sell these maps.

"Each entry contains driving directions to all of the ramps on that waterbody," Hardin said. "They also contain a link to the Fishing Forecast, detailing the fishing for many species in waterbodies across the state."

Planning a float trip on a stream can be daunting. The "Canoeing and Kayaking" page contains loads of information to help select a place to paddle. You may click on the "Stream Fisheries" tab for detailed information on access sites, lengths of floats and recommended floating levels for streams across Kentucky.

This page also contains photos of each access point and a description of the access. This is invaluable information to paddlers floating a stream for the first time. This page also shows the abundance and size structure of the population of the desirable fish in the stream such as rock bass or smallmouth bass.

The "Canoeing and Kayaking" page also contains a link to the award winning Blue Water Trails series of articles detailing more than 30 different floats across Kentucky. These articles also contain fishing tips for the species in the waterbody as well as a printable map.

"If you are trying to figure out a place for the coming weekend, our website has many resources to help guide you," Hardin said. "We want people to enjoy our water resources and catch some fish."

Public Notices

SPECIAL NOTICE

TO: Parents, Guardians, and School Employees
FR: Jeff Aulick, Superintendent
RE: Asbestos Management Plan 2017-2018 School Year

This notice is being issued to inform concerned individuals. The Bracken County Board of Education meets both National and State regulations that relate to asbestos-containing building materials (ACBM).

An inspection for building materials that contain asbestos has been completed for all buildings owned, leased or otherwise occupied by the Bracken County Board of Education. A certified inspector has conducted this inspection and an accredited laboratory evaluated the material samples. Building materials with as little asbestos as one percent (1%) have been identified and made part of the Asbestos Management Plan.

A complete Asbestos Management Plan for the school district is on file at the Bracken County Board of Education Office. A copy is also available for each individual school at the respective school's office.

We will continue to notify the public at least once each year on the status of the Asbestos Management Plan. Should it be necessary, more frequent updates will be issued from additional inspections, normal surveillance practices, response actions or remodel work that might disturb asbestos building materials. Every precaution will be used to protect the well being of students and employees of the Bracken County School System.

New Immunization Regulation in Effect for 2017-18 School Year

Revisions to 902 KAR 2:060, the immunization regulation, became effective on June 21, 2017. The regulation requires all children attending child day care centers, certified family childcare homes and other licensed facilities that care for children, preschool programs, and public and private primary and secondary schools to have a current immunization certificate on file. The regulation also spells out the required immunizations schedule for attending those schools, facilities, and programs.

The regulation also applies to all home schooled children who participate in any public or private school activities (classroom, extra curriculum activity, or sports). This provision is designed to promote the public health interest for all children and adults involved. “We are starting to see a rise in cases of measles, mumps, chicken pox, and other diseases that had been previously eliminated within our communities,” said Kentucky Department of Public Health Commissioner Dr. Hiram C. Polk, Jr.

Every year, measles and other vaccine preventable diseases are brought into the United States by unvaccinated travelers. “The federal Centers for Disease Control and Prevention and Kentucky Department of Public Health encourage our families and children to be protected from these diseases”, continued Dr. Polk.

The regulation also provides for a religious exemption from the immunizations. State law requires a written sworn statement for religious exemptions for these immunizations. The regulation eliminates the previous requirement for a doctor’s visit to obtain an exemption. The regulation now allows a parent or guardian to obtain the Commonwealth of Kentucky Parent or Guardian’s Declaration on Religious Grounds to Required Immunizations form online. Each immunization is listed on the form and a parent or guardian can choose which immunization the child may or may not receive, sign, and have the form notarized. The completed and notarized declaration form shall be submitted at the time of enrollment in a child care facility or school.

New immunization forms are on the websites for the Kentucky Department of Education and the Kentucky Immunization Program at:

Living Lands & Water’s johnboats in Augusta to clean the Ohio River

Living Land and Water’s johnboats arrived in Augusta this past weekend seeking volunteers to help with clean up around the Ohio River on the riverbanks. When Chad Pregracke began, he was just one man in one boat with a big vision to clean America’s rivers by removing trash from riverbanks and islands on the Mississippi River. In 1998, he founded a river cleanup nonprofit, Living Lands & Waters (LL&W). Today LL&W follows the same river routes, but instead of being one man in a single boat, they bring community volunteers out in a fleet of up to 6 johnboats, with a full time crew who live on the river cleanup barge, traveling America’s Rivers up to 9 months of the year. Since 1998, LL&W has worked with over 100,000 volunteers, on 23 rivers in 20 states, removing over 10 million pounds of debris from US Waterways.

Most of the cleanups last 2-3 hours. If available, you can sign-up for their morning cleanup, afternoon cleanup, or both. LL&W provides everything needed including: life jackets, gloves, trash bags, sunscreen, bug spray, and drinking water. Volunteers are asked to wear old clothes they don’t mind getting dirty, required closed-toed shoes, long pants, hats and sunglasses, and to bring a reusable water bottle.

Lunch is provided for the volunteers between the morning and afternoon cleanups. If you would like to help in this effort contact Monique at monique@livinglandsandwaters.org or call 309-732-6101 to register. Registration is required. Cleanups began on Tuesday, August 1st and will continue through Saturday, August 5th. Times for the cleanups are 9 a.m. to noon and 1-4 p.m. and may vary from day to day.

Since 1997, LL&W’s river cleanups have collected over: 82,625 tires, 1,375 propane tanks, 719 toy dolls, 23,774 balls, and 117,884 trash bags filled with plastic bottles, and styrofoam cups, etc.

Drivers be aware – it’s back to school time!

Drivers should be cautious and watch for buses and schoolchildren

State highway crews will begin activating traffic warning flashers at schools across northeast Kentucky next week as students and teachers return to classrooms.

And, that means hundreds of buses will be sharing roadways with work-day commuters each morning and afternoon. Most schools will hold first days the week of Aug. 7, with some returning the week of Aug. 14.

The Transportation Cabinet reminds all drivers to slow down in school zones, obey warning flashers on buses and never pass a bus on undivided highways when the stop arm is extended, and drive carefully.

According to the National Highway Traffic Safety Administration, the greatest risk is not riding the bus, but approaching or leaving the bus. Before children go back to school or start school for the first time, it is essential that adults and children know traffic safety rules.

Drivers

- When backing out of a driveway, driving in neighborhoods or near schools zones, watch out for children.

- Slow down. Watch for children near bus stops, and stay alert. Put down the phone.

- Obey speed limit warning flashers near schools.

- Learn and obey the school bus laws in your state. Learn the “flashing signal light system” that school bus drivers use to alert motorists of pending actions:

- Yellow flashing lights indicate that the bus is preparing to stop to load or unload children. Motorists should slow down and prepare to stop their vehicles.

- Red flashing lights and extended stop arms indicate that the bus has stopped, and that children are getting on or off. Motorists must stop their cars and wait until the red lights stop flashing, the extended stop sign is withdrawn, and the bus begins moving before they can start driving again.

Children

- Get to the bus stop at least five minutes before the bus is scheduled to arrive.

- When the bus approaches, stand at least three giant steps (6 feet) away from the curb, and line up away from the street.

- Wait until the bus stops, the door opens, and the driver says that it’s okay before stepping onto the bus.

- If you have to cross the street in front of the bus, walk on the sidewalk or along the side of the road to a point at least five giant steps (10 feet) ahead of the bus before you cross. Be sure that the bus driver can see you, and you can see the bus driver.

- Use the handrails to avoid falls. When exiting the bus, be careful that clothing with drawstrings, and book bags with straps don’t get caught in the handrails or doors.

- Never walk behind the bus.

- Walk at least three giant steps away from the side of the bus.

- If you drop something near the bus, tell the bus driver. Never try to pick it up because the driver may not be able to see you.
